

TigerShark Swam in Today !!!

a review and photographs by Tim P - reprinted with permission

I really like this watch a lot!! ... HIGHLY RECOMMENDED!!!

I've been pretty excited about getting this one!! I've always liked the Invicta 9937/9938 series, but felt they had a few weak points. When I found the "TigerShark", it seemed to address a lot of them.

Very nice presentation, plain outer white box, black inner box with a replica of the Tigershark caseback on top.

First thing I noticed out of the box was how SOLID it feels. There is no rattle to the bracelet, everything fits like a glove, tight and solid.

The bracelet is solidly built with screw attached links. The clasp is milled, and the divers extension is milled as well, unlike a lot of the cheaply stamped extensions you find.

The watch itself looks terrific, in that Rolex-esque design homage carried out by so many. Bezel is 120 clicks, solid as well, and I like the detail of the hour marker at 12, just a little different, making it unique in its own way. Of particular note, the hour markers use SuperLuminova, not tritium, so the glow is exceptional. Sorry, I stink at lume shots, so none to show you.

Case is a nice 39.5mm x 50mm lug to lug classic size, crown screws down tightly and smoothly with 2 gaskets providing 300m WR. The movement is an ETA 2824-2, just received, so I cannot comment on out of the box accuracy, but assume it will be typical. Update to follow....

I chose the TT model...

I really like this watch a lot!! It addresses most of the issues I've had with the 99XX series from Invicta, while still keeping the price at a VERY reasonable level. HIGHLY RECOMMENDED!!!
